LINERS HELD FAST BY FIELDS OF ICE

Three Ships Believed to Be Imprisoned on Northern Coast,

ICE-BREAKERS ARE HELPLESS

Captain Saw Two Powerful Craft Imbedded, and No Way Open for Escape.

HALIFAX, N. S., May 4.—Three large trans-Atlantic liners are believed to be imprisoned in the vast ice glids that completely block Cabot strait, between Newtondland and Cape Breton, and other lines in the Montreal and St. Lawrence service have been forced to land passengers and freight in this part after ineffectual attempts to pierce the impenetrable barrier. The Allan line steamer Sardinian, Captain Mear, from London and Havre for Montreal, which was forced into this port vesterday to land her six hundred passengers, reports that imbedded in the Ice fields he could see two large steamers. One was the Allan liner, which Captain Mear thought was the Vancouver, which sailed for Montreal from Liverpool on April 29, the same day on which the Ontarian left London. Both of these powerful ships, Captain Mear reported were helpless and moving only with the uncertain motion of the ice fields. He was unable to see the Allan line steamer Ionian, which is also believed to be fast in the Ice. Ionian arrived here April 27 from Liverpool, which port she left April 18, and sailed from here on the twenty-eighth for Quebec with a thousand passengers on board. She has not since been reported and it is thought that she too must be at the mercy of the fields somewhere in the Gulf of St. Lawrence. The fields stretch across Cabot strait for a distance of a little over fifty miles and to add to the dangers of navigation a thick fog hangs over the coast. Not for years has the opening of the summer service to Montreal been so delayed as this year and as a result immense quantities of freight designated for that port, which in the summer is one of the greatest shipping terminals on the continent, have been severely delayed.

The lee conditions this winter all up and down the cost of the maritime provinces has been worse than for many seasons and has caused great damage to shipping and marine interests. The government ice-breaking steumers have been helpless for weeks at a time, having been caught in their efforts to relieve other vessel

Poems You Ought to Know.

Whatever your occupation may be, and however crowded your hours with affairs, do not fail to secure at least a few minutes every day for refreshment of your inner life with a bit of poetry.—Prof. Charles Eliot Norton.

Fly to the Desert.

By THOMAS MOORE,

This poem is one of the songs in "Lalla Rookh." The bird called the lapwing was supposed to have the power of finding water underground. Other selections from Moore, his portrait, autograph and biographical sketch, have already been printed in this series.

Our Arab tents are rude for thee; But, oh! the choice what heart can doubt, Of tents with love, or thrones without?

Our rocks are rough, but smiling there Th' acacia waves her yellow hair, Lonely and sweet, nor loved the less For flowering in a wilderness.

Our sands are bare, but down their slope The silvery-footed antelope As gracefully and gayly springs As o'er the marble courts of kings.

Then come—thy Arab maid will be The loved and lone acacia-tree, The antelope, whose feet shall bless With their light sound thy loneliness.

Oh! there are looks and tones that dart An instant sunshine through the heart,— As if the soul that minute caught Some treasure it through life had sought;

Predestined to have all our sighs, And never be forgot again, Sparkled and spoken before us then!

So came thy every glance and tone When first on me they breathed and shone; New, as if brought from other spheres, Yet welcome as if loved for years.

Then fly with me,-if thou hast known No other flame, nor falsely thrown A gem away, that thou hadst sworn Should ever in thy heart be worn.

Come, if the love thou hast for me, Is pure and fresh as mine for thee, Fresh as the fountain under ground, When first 'tis by the lapwing found,

But if for me thou dost forsake Some other maid, and rudely break Her worshipped image from its base, To give to me the ruined place; -

Then, fare thee well-I'd rather make My bower upon some icy lake When thawing suns begin to shine Than trust to love so false as thine
